The Philadelphia Inquire

Wednesday, March 27, 2019 Philadelphia Media Network

Lawsuits say 3 Philly hotels ignored sex slavery on their properties

By Joseph A. Gambardello,

Lawsuits filed Wednesday on behalf of two young women who had 16 years old, following raids by the been forced "The lawsuit filed to- police and FBI, according to the day will seek to remedy the disre- complaint accompanying the lawgard of the degradation and humili- suits. ation of young women in order to pursue a profit," said attorney Tom Named in the suits, filed in the Kline of Kline & Specter, which Philadelphia Court of Common represents the young women. Pleas, are the owner and manage-"These lawsuits seek to right a ment companies of the Roosevelt wrong on behalf of the victims of Inn and Days Inn, both located on not only crime, but illicit gain."

The suits come two years after the Motor Inns, on City Avenue in the law firm filed a similar action the first of its kind in Pennsylvania their management companies did -against the Roosevelt Inn under not immediately respond to rethe state's 2014 human trafficking quests for comment. law.

At that time, the Roosevelt's man-plaintiffs, identified only as C.A. ager, Yagna Patel, said he was not aware of minors being prostituted at the hotel.

"We just rent the room and that's customers at the hotels. all we can do," Patel said, adding that "if we think a lot of people are The hotels, according to the suit, having a party in the room, we kick failed to take steps to prevent the them out." into prostitution when trafficking "and instead permitted they were teenagers say three Phil- heinous and unspeakable acts to adelphia hotels turned a blind eye occur." to human trafficking and profited from the alleged victims being used as sex slaves.

The plaintiffs were freed in 2013, when they were 15 and

Roosevelt Boulevard in Northeast Philadelphia, and North American Wynnefield section. The hotels or

According to the complaint, the and B.H., were forced into prostitution for several months by two different traffickers and drugged so they would have sex with paying

The suits seek unspecified compenand punitive satory damages against the defendants.