

Personal Injury Litigation: The Briggs Case

Pennsylvania - New Jersey - New York - Nationwide

Several months after the Briggs case was won in Allegheny County Court, Ryan's parents had used money from the award to set up a trust in his name. They planned to move from their mobile home to a specially equipped ranch house. Diana, who had felt physically ill during much of the May trial, found out why - she was expecting her third child. In November the Briggs sent the following note in a card to the attorneys who had worked with them for two years to win the record-setting verdict:

Thank You

Shanin, Andy, Lisa and Staff,

Michael and I wanted to let you know how grateful we are for all you've done for Ryan and our family. "Thank You" can never express how we feel for all you've done for us. Ryan's trust is up and running. We recently purchased a van with a lift system and we're waiting for the judge's approval on a house we wish to purchase. We no longer fear the future. We've learned of new therapies for Ryan and can't wait to try them. You have forever changed our lives! But most of all you've given us the ability to give Ryan an amazing life. The designs for his therapy room and bath and bedroom are a dream come true. We'll invite you to a barbecue when we move in! Thank you, thank you for all that you've done!
